A Large Ormolu-Mounted 'Sèvres' Style Porcelain Vase
By Georges Émile Poitevin

The tall single vase in the neoclassical style of Louis XVI, constructed from porcelain and decorated with gilt bronze mounts, raised on a circular base with laurel wreath, the vase set with a large cartouche of a courting couple to the front, and another cartouche with a landscape scene, surrounded by gilt raised rococo borders and a dark blue cobalt ground, the body mounted with twin handles shaped as winged female herms; the lid with an ormolu pinecone finial above the pierced rinceaux frieze. The porcelain signed 'Poitevin.'
French, circa 1885

The porcelain painter Georges Émile Poitevin is recorded as working at rue Saint-Sébastien 9, Paris in the late 19th century.
