

AN UNUSUAL PAIR OF WILLIAM IV CARVED STOOLS

Dimensions: 18 in / 46 cm | W: 20 in / 51 cm | D: 20 in / 51 cm

8016

Original Price: £6,500 | Special Offer: £2,500

Currently in unrestored original condition, please contact us for further information.

An Unusual Pair of Carved Stools

Carved from rosewood, the stools on incurved platform bases dressed with carved pearls and supported on ball & claw feet fitted with hidden castors, the platforms centred with a turned finial, S-scrolled legs issuing from the corners supporting the seats within its egg-and-dart moulding, with scrolling carved ornaments to all sides.

English, circa 1835

Dimensions: 18 in / 46 cm | W: 20 in / 51 cm | D: 20 in / 51 cm

The “Jacobethan” style, a term coined by John Betjemann, was a decorative arts trend starting in the 1820s which combined various design sources from Jacobean, Elizabethan and Stuart periods to inform contemporary 19th century furniture. It continued to flourish throughout the 1830s and 1840s, as particularly evident in some Gothic-inspired furniture by Pugin for the Palace of Westminster.