

A PAIR OF GEORGE III STYLE GILTWOOD MIRRORS

Dimensions: H: 65.5 in / 166 cm | W: 25 in / 64 cm | D: 6.5 in / 16 cm

10543

A Pair of George III Style Giltwood Mirrors

The pair of Chinese Chippendale style frames carved from giltwood and housing original rectangular mirrored plates, surmounted by carved mythological Ho-Ho birds with outstretched wings perched on rocky outcrops, with carved C-scrolls, icicles and stylised acanthus leaves.

English, circa 1860

The Ho Ho bird, a Japanese mythical counterpart to the phoenix, became a favoured motif in Asian decorative arts before entering 18th-century European design, where its composite form symbolised longevity, fidelity, and wisdom. In England, it appears most frequently atop Georgian fret mirrors from around 1760, where a gilt Ho Ho bird introduces a lively, exotic flourish.

Literature:

Comparative Literature:

Child, Graham. World Mirrors: 1650-1900. London: Sotheby's Publications, 1990, p. 128 fig. 180 & 182 for related mirrors.