A Late Georgian Jardiniere Table
firmly attributed to Gillows

Constructed of well figured Rosewood, rising from tripod scrolled feet, with foliate carving to the curved legs, lotus leaf and ring turned central stem; the jardinière fitted with a spring-release removable rosewood top revealing a liner underneath, and having a moulded edge with bead and reel decoration.

English, circa 1830

According to furniture historian Christopher Payne, the scrolled gallery divided by four die-stamped inset gadrooned mouldings is a feature repeatedly used by Gillow.
