A Fine Satinwood Console Table Attributed to Wright and Mansfield

A superb example of the neoclassical revival attributed to the esteemed makers Wright and Mansfield, this console table is crafted in satinwood, having a shaped top intricately inlaid with floral swags centred upon a classical urn. The frieze, adorned with three disguised drawers, is veneered in fine hawthorn with contrasting inlays interspersed with fan paterae, set above a central arch flanked by two small cupboards. Each cupboard door features an oval panel exquisitely painted with a cherub, framed in rich mahogany and surrounded by floral marquetry swags and pendant husks. The table is supported by six square-section tapering legs. English, circa 1880

A similar example by Wright and Mansfield was exhibited at the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition of 1876 and is illustrated in The Art Journal, p. 165.
