A Pair of Large Painted & Parcel Gilt Porcelain Vases
Attributed to Jacob Petit

The porcelain baluster vases inspired by Rococo and Far East influences, with flared rim and gilded twin handles of coiled dragons perched on the sides, each vase meticulously hand-decorated on varying white ground, pink ground, and green ground reserves, with a large cartouche depicting birds, including ducks and parrots, within a landscaped garden with capriccio view beyond, surrounded by scrolling ornament and floral garlands intertwined with ribbons. The inside of the rim decorated in a conforming pattern. Unmarked, with remnants of an old paper label.

French, circa 1840

A pair of porcelain vases attributed to Jacob Petit, also with gilt dragon handles, is in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York (26.223.15, .16)
